

‘Bring a friend to work day’

The value of dragging non evaluator colleagues along to the AES Conference

Liam Downing

liamdowning@gmail.com

<https://flickr/p/A2F4TG>

<https://ilic.kr/p/6SWuyW>

<https://tic.kr/g/nrwwfr>

<https://flic.kr/p/RUwkFc>

<https://flic.kr/p/5GEaDW>

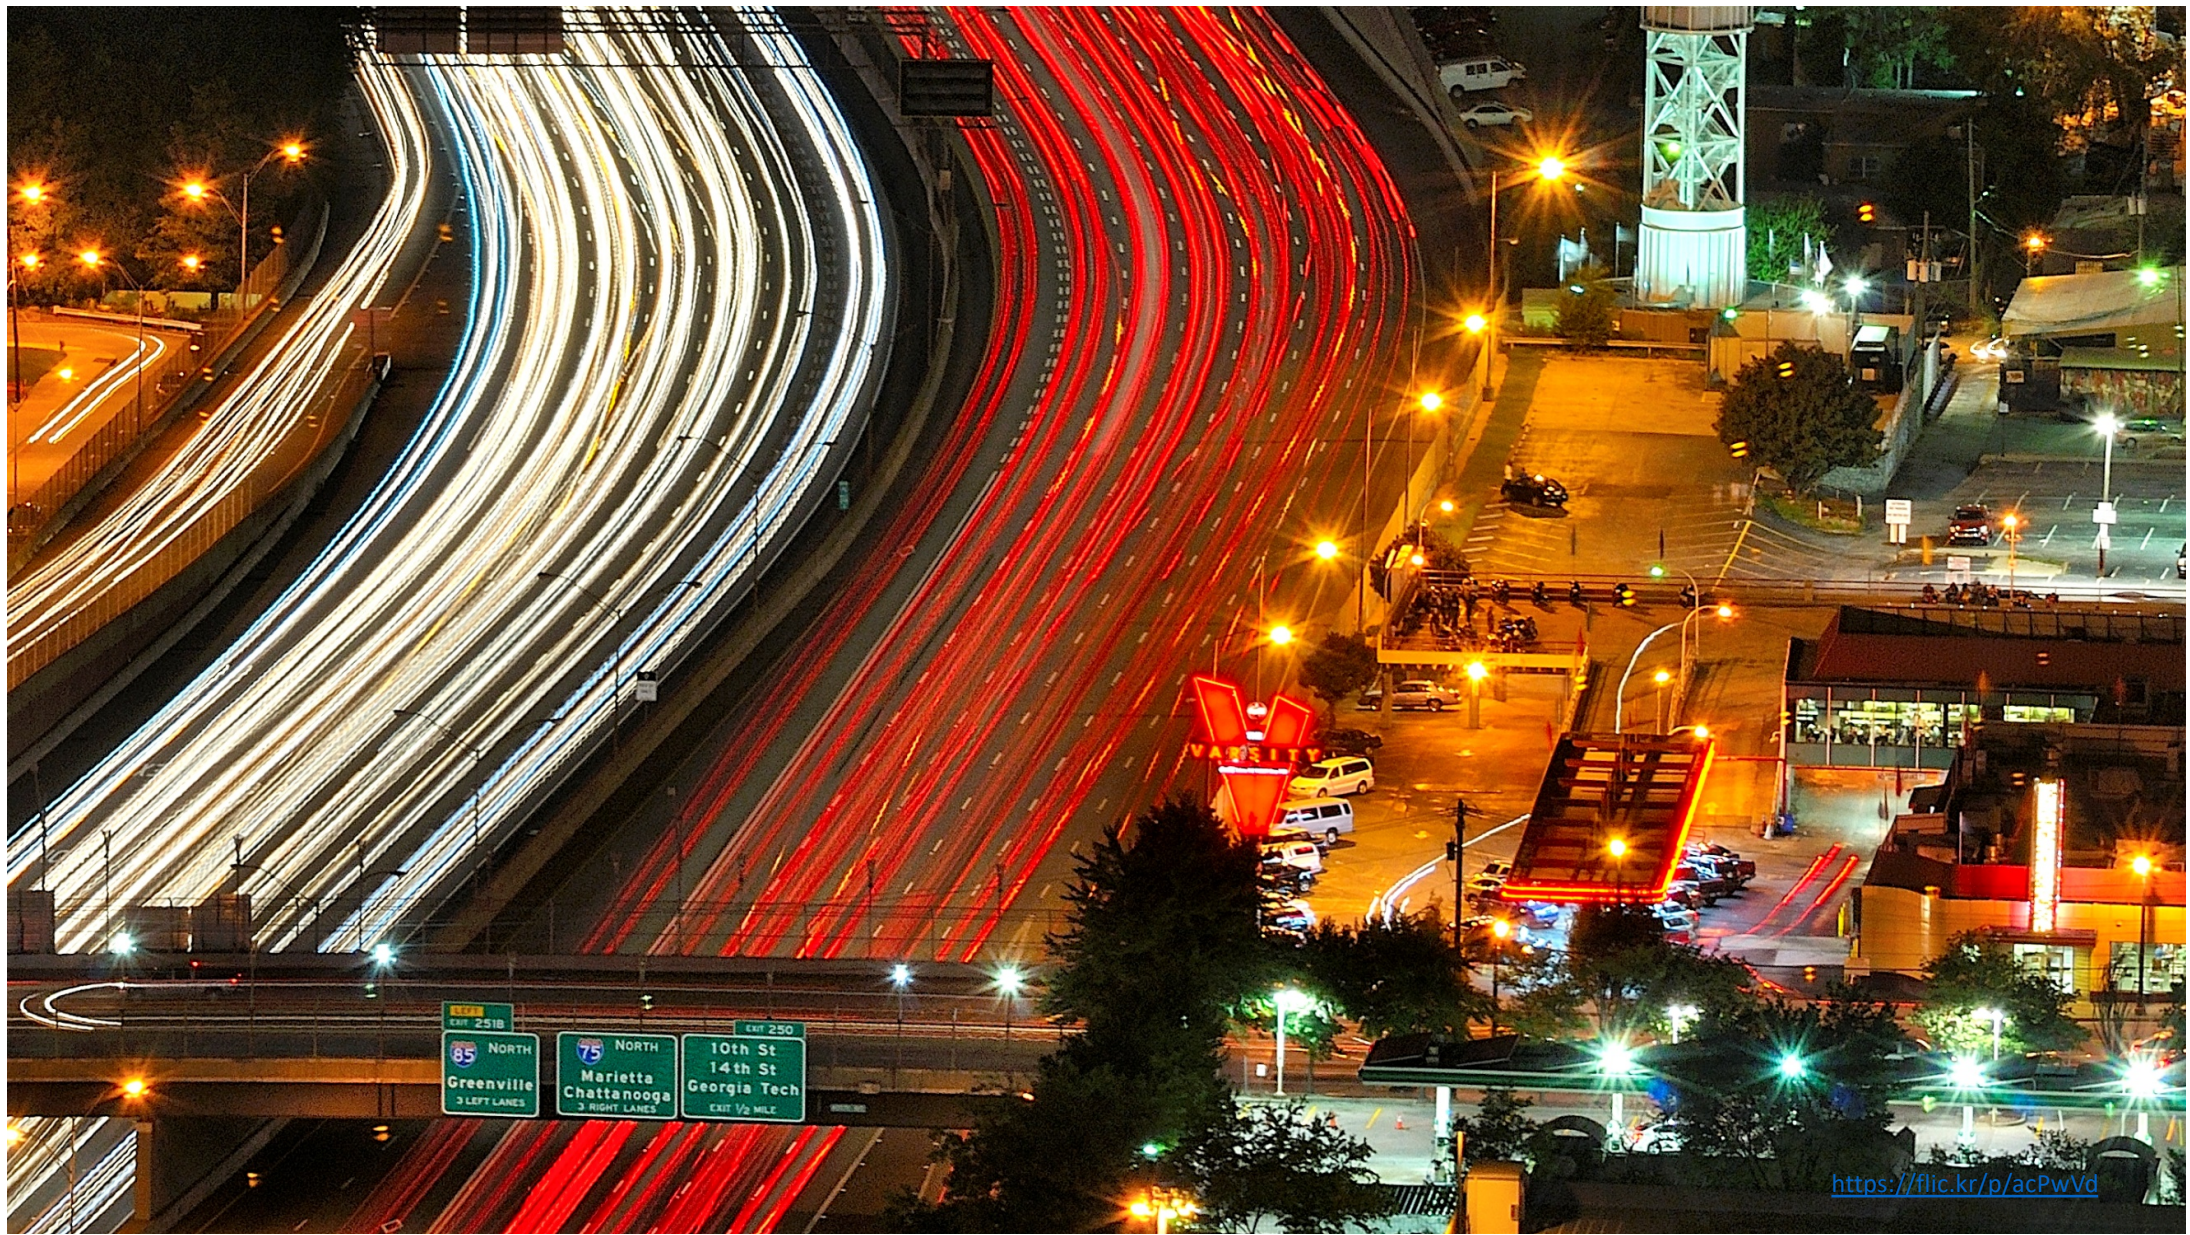

Mr. J O H N S O N'S

P R E F A C E

To his E D I T I O N of Shakeſpear's Plays.

“I don’t actually work that much with Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander students, but I found myself drawn to those sessions because they sounded like things I needed to learn.”

“It was a really relaxed setting. They got everyone to sit down on the floor with them, and they reflected on their experience[...] I wasn’t expecting that kind of dialogue in a presentation about evaluation.”

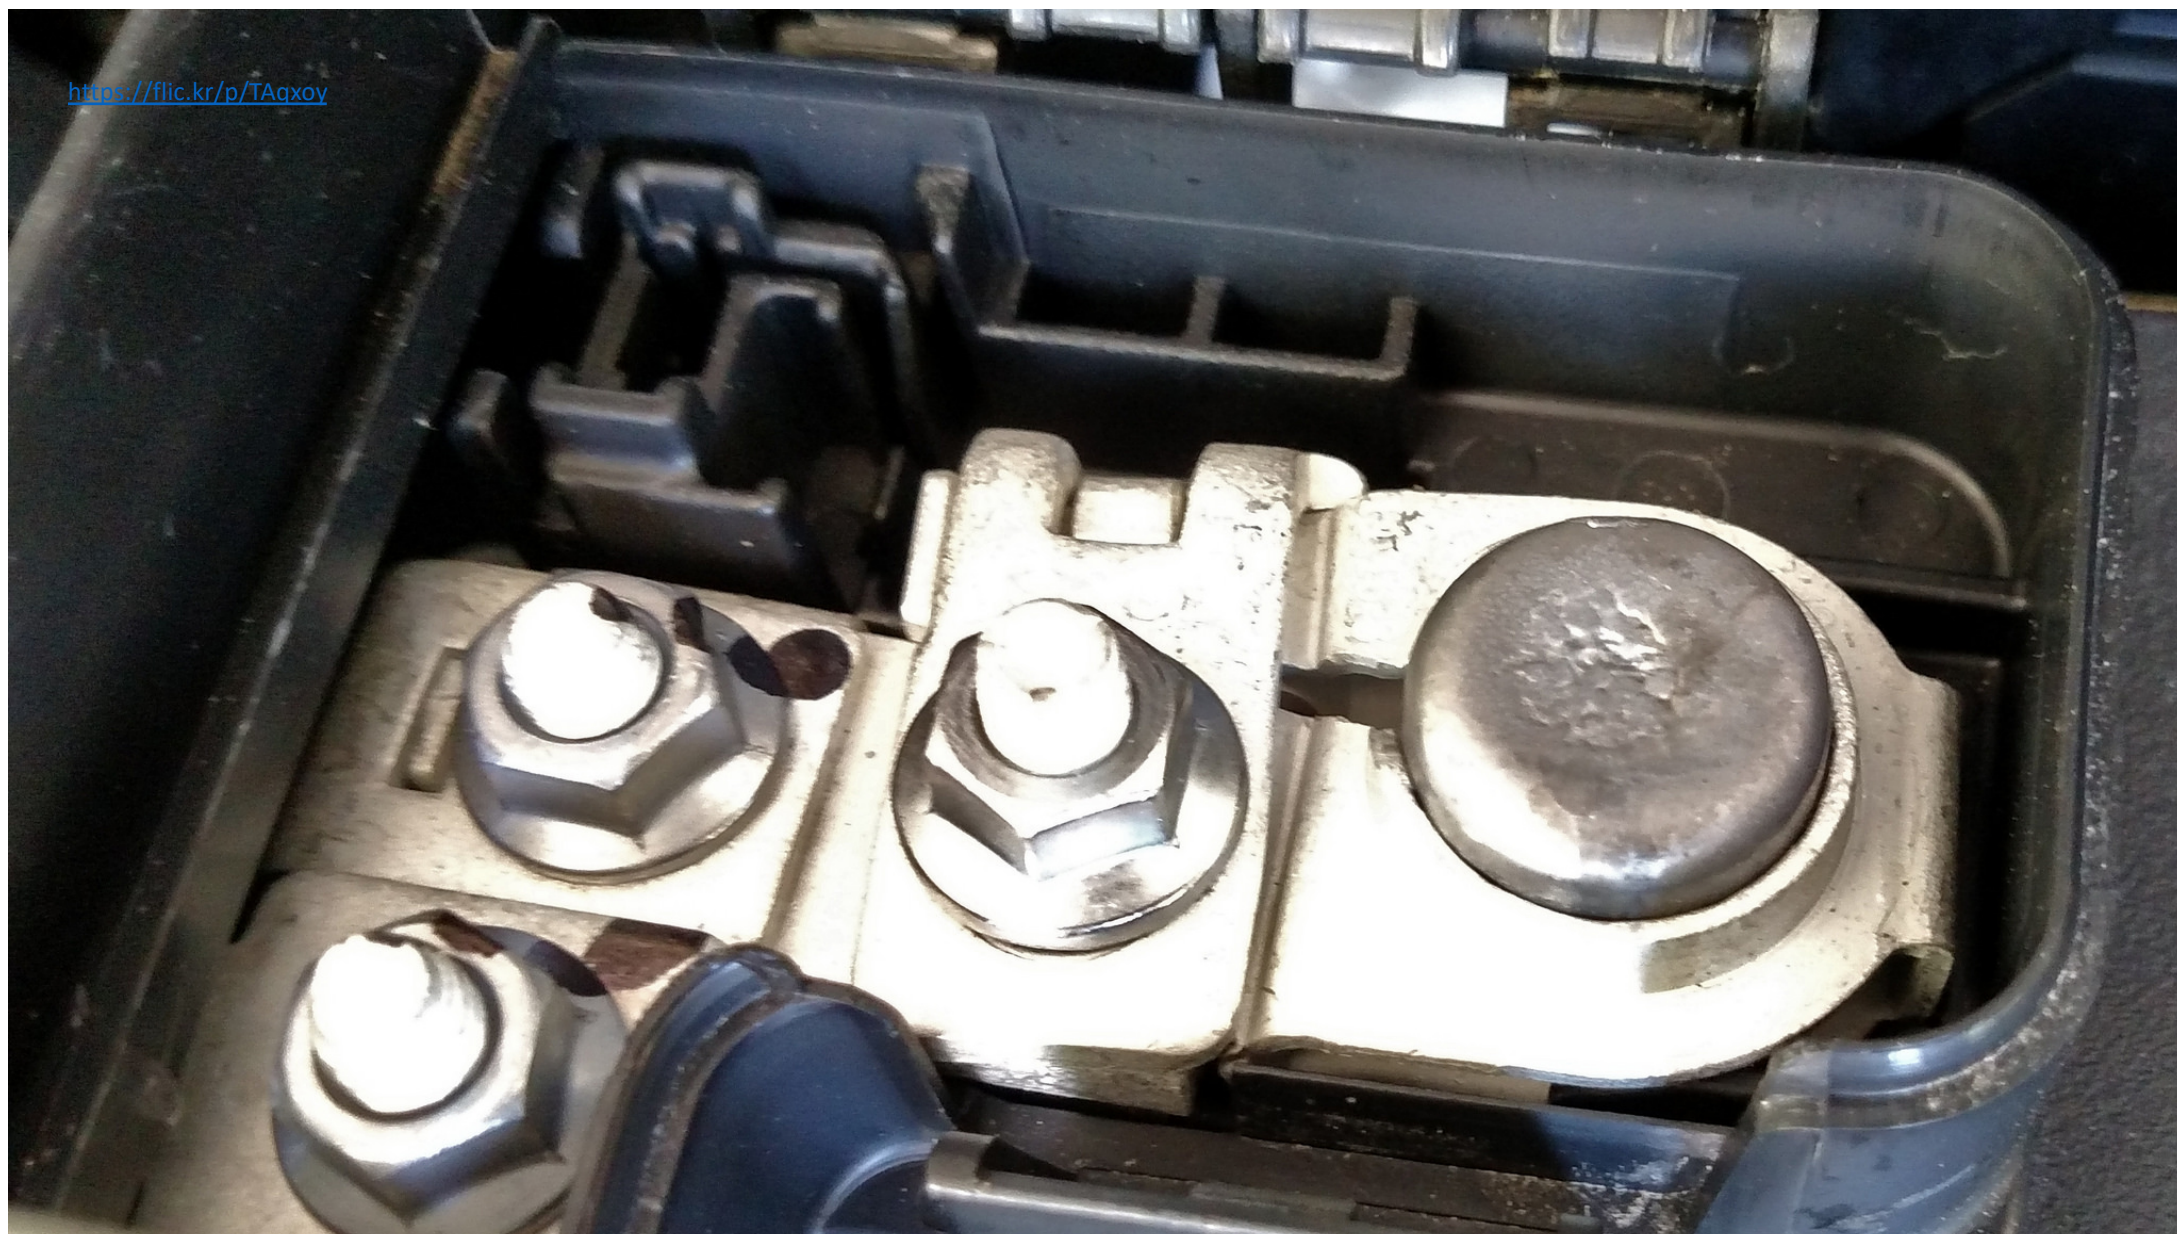

“That stuff that Richard spoke about with evaluation carrying power, and the need to ensure that it is used to benefit the people you’re evaluating, that’s something I’ve used in work outside the uni, in my community.”

“I’ve carried that sense with me since. It’s funny because I kind of don’t really remember it, but chatting with you now makes me realise how much I go back to it.”

<https://flic.kr/p/9io4S7>

<https://flic.kr/p/TAqxov>

NO
SATURATED
FAT

WONDER

ENRICHED BREAD

<https://flic.kr/p/1G63st>

<https://flic.kr/p/arLK7e>